

ClearPath's Commitment to the Environment

ClearPath Signage Systems, a division of Rowmark LLC, takes its role in environmental stewardship seriously and are committed to minimizing our environmental impact, while continuing to offer the highest quality products and services in the industry.

We stand committed to producing materials in our Findlay, Ohio manufacturing facility, with the safest and most environmentally conscious processes possible, and are continuously evaluating new ways to make all our products environmentally friendly for the good of our community, nation and Earth.

Plastic products manufactured and supplied by Rowmark and ClearPath do contain post-industrial recycled plastic when applicable and available, averaging 20% in certain products. Once a Rowmark sheet product is consumed, it may be recycled, and we encourage our customers to explore recycling options with Rowmark materials. ClearPath aluminum frame systems may also be recycled as well. In addition, Rowmark does not landfill manufacturing waste materials as it is reclaimed and reused during the manufacturing process.

ClearPath strategically operates in ethical, socially responsible and innovative ways that exemplify resource efficiency through the prudent use of materials and resources. We strive for continuous improvement in our performance wherever possible and practical. Our environmental guidelines seek to encompass the most current scientific, business and social environmental practices. While signage products do not directly result in points toward LEED certified projects, ClearPath is dedicated to long-term environmentally conscious practices, both as a company and in the products we offer.

Our guidelines include:

- Responsible resource use
- Elimination or significant reduction in the use of hazardous material
- Elimination or significant reduction of emissions to air and water
- Sourcing materials, products and services from environmentally conscious suppliers
- Providing customers with accurate information about the performance of our materials
- Ongoing research and development to ensure ClearPath products and services remain on the leading edge of environmental thinking, concepts and performance

The sustainable application of materials, resources and services continues to be a key priority for ClearPath and Rowmark, LLC, as we remain committed to environmental protection, social responsibility and economic progress.